Injured pole dancer Matt Lovell meets attractive radiographer Sal when he's in casualty for an x-ray. Trouble is, Matt's firefighter outfit is pretty convincing, and the longer he keeps up the pretence the harder it will be to reveal the naked truth: that there's nothing underneath his costume but a sequin-covered thong! by Josephine Myles

Josephine Myles' short-story, "Pole Star," is okay to read. She isn't a bad writer. I think she uses colorful words to describe things. When I first started reading the story, I thought, "This isn't really pulling me in, but I will continue reading." I don't care for either of the main characters, but the erotica is okay.
