The new atheists are very fond of saying, "We don't need God to be good." Indeed, they often say that atheists, agnostics and skeptics often lead more wholesome lives than lifelong professing Christians. Now, theists should not be fooled by this. Our response should be, "Of course you don't need God to be good — we've...

If only there was a name for an infinite, omnipresent, all-good force or being... let's call it God! Note that this does not prove that any particular God exists; it doesn't even prove that God is a personal being. What it does prove, however, is that you cannot be good without God. The idea has no meaning apart from a solid foundation.
