Book review -- By Anatole France - PENGUIN ISLAND

You can credit Anatole France, winner of the 1921 Nobel Prize in Literature, with the famous maxim: 'The law, in its majestic equality, forbids the rich as well as the poor to sleep under bridges, to beg in the streets, and to steal bread.' Penguin Island starts with a fantastic premise.

Penguin Island by Anatole France, Paperback | Barnes & Noble®

L'Île des Pingouins (1908) A satirisation of events in France's history and the human condition by portraying them as baptised penguins. I first read this delightful satire some time ago, about the age of 14, and the premise struck me as a perfect antidote to any of the missionary zeal that lingered in my soul from the upbringing I had received from my family.
