Good Morning, Midnight is a 1939 modernist novel by the author Jean Rhys. Often considered a continuation of Rhys' three other early novels, Quartet (1928), After Leaving Mr Mackenzie (1930) and Voyage in the Dark (1934), it is experimental in design and deals with a woman's feelings of vulnerability, depression, loneliness and desperation during the years between the two World Wars.

Good Morning, Midnight (Rhys novel) - Wikipedia

Good Morning, Midnight is the suicide attempt after the first three Jean Rhys novels. In the river, not thrown in but feet wading in the tepidly toxic puddle. The dirty Seine. The unchosen clothes because they are front and back of the wardrobe still on. I don't know where the shoes are. Probably still on the shelf because there wasn't a fight.

Doniger mentions literature in her argument and, indeed, the theme of wearing masks is a common one. However, in Jean Rhys's Good Morning, Midnight (1938), the consequences of removing one's mask reveals the dangers which arise from such an act. The masks people wear, and the consequences of removing them, pervades Rhys's novel.
